Course Information Sheet for entry in 2020~21

Undergraduate Diploma in English Social and Local History

About the course

The Diploma in English Social and Local History is a part-time, modular course, lasting two years. The level is that of a second-year undergraduate programme. The course covers the main themes and sources of English social and local history and the techniques needed for interpreting historical evidence.

The Diploma has two modules, which divide into pre-1600 (Module One) and post-1600 (Module Two). You can take the modules in either order.

In 2020~21 Module 1: English Social and Local History to c.1660 will be running.

Each year there will be 6 weekends of 12 hours each, including fieldtrips and at least one phone or in-person tutorial. In Michaelmas Term 2020 the two weekends will be taught remotely via MS Teams, with the aim of returning to in-person residential teaching from Hilary Term 2021, circumstances permitting.

Module 1: English Social and Local History to c.1660

This module covers the period from roughly c. 800CE to the Restoration of the monarchy following the Civil Wars and Republic (1640-60). Its emphasis is on the lives, occupations, beliefs and environments of people, and the communities they lived in. It covers such diverse topics as Church and religion, monasteries, the changing nature of towns and rural communities, the worlds of work and leisure, migration and population change, and the Black Death. Later parts cover the Reformation, social change under the Tudors and early Stuarts, and the breakdown of English society leading up to and during the Civil Wars. Special subjects are currently: Riot and Rebellion, 1381-1607, and Civil War, Revolution and Republic, 1640-1660.

Module 2: English Social and Local History from c.1660

This module covers the period after the Restoration and up to the late twentieth century. It looks at how the dramatic social changes of modernity have changed the lives of English people and their communities. Topics span from the vibrancy of Restoration society – the age of Samuel Pepys, the Great Fire of London, coffee houses, William Hogarth, and the East India Company – through the Georgian and Victorian worlds. It covers the impact of enclosure, industrialization, and the growth of empire, as well as the wealth and poverty of Victorian England. Later topics include the impact of the World Wars, and the drastic social changes brought by the twentieth century. Additional activities may include a field trip to Georgian Bath and a workshop on oral history. Special subjects are currently: Family and Community in Rural England, 1650-1900, and Social Unrest and Popular Protest, 1840-1940.

Assessment

For each module, students will be required to complete three coursework assignments, each of which shall not exceed 2,500 words in length; one extended essay which shall not exceed 6,000 words in length, based on material taught during the course; and one source work exercise which shall not exceed 2,000 words in length commenting on selected primary sources.

Students who achieve an overall pass rate of 70%+ and pass each element of assessed work at the first attempt will be considered by the examiners for the award of a distinction.

Attendance (online or in person)

In each module candidates are expected to attend a minimum of 80% of the sessions.
