

Course Information Sheet for entry in 2016-17

MPhil in Comparative Social Policy

About the course

The MPhil in Comparative Social Policy explores welfare systems and policy developments across a range of different countries. The comparative element is a key part of the course, and is one feature that makes the course at Oxford unique.

The central aim of the MPhil in Comparative Social Policy at the Department of Social Policy and Intervention is to provide high quality graduate level research training in social policy, taking a comparative perspective, concentrating primarily on industrialised/developed countries. More specific aims are to develop your capacity to:

analyse, interpret and review the major concepts, theoretical approaches and historical and contemporary issues in social policy and welfare state development in a range of countries or systems;

analyse and compare specific areas of social policy (eg health, education) in different countries or systems, drawing on both empirical data and broader theoretical literature; and undertake both quantitative and qualitative research studies, and to understand the major issues involved in research design and technical analysis in social policy related research.

The MPhil course is an extended version of the MSc in Comparative Social Policy. In the first year you will study together with the MSc group and in the second year you will primarily focus on your research project, under individually-tailored supervision.

You will study a core paper in comparative social policy. This paper covers the theories, principles, history and institutions of social policy, and is taught via a closely-linked package of lectures, seminars, small working seminars or classes and individual tutorials. You will also engage in more detailed work on social policy analysis.

The research methods skills, covering both quantitative and qualitative methods, are taught in a mix of lectures, classes, workshops and 'hands-on' computer lab based weekly training sessions. In addition, there is a course on the principles of comparative research design. You will also take two specialist courses from a list of options focusing on a particular social policy area or the application of evidence-based intervention. Recent options offered include demography, education policies, family policies, healthcare, labour market policies and poverty.

Your performance will be assessed through formative and summative assignments/papers.

Knowledge of the substantive areas of social policy is assessed by two three hour papers at the end of the third term. One covers comparative social policy/welfare states in general; the other focuses on the student's chosen area of specialism. The research method skills are assessed by means of formal course assignments and 'methods essays' on published research papers. In addition, you will be required to provide a 30,000-word dissertation.

Changes to courses

The University will seek to deliver each course in accordance with the descriptions set out above. However, there may be situations in which it is desirable or necessary for the University to make changes in course provision, either before or after registration. For further information, please see the University's Terms and Conditions.

Expected length of course

21 months

Annual fees for entry in 2016-2017

Fee Status	Tuition fee	College fee	Total annual fees
Home/EU (including islands)	£11,940	£2,933	£14,873
Overseas	£18,770	£2,933	£21,703
