

Course Information Sheet for entry in 2016-17

MPhil in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology

About the course

The MPhil in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology is a taught course offering a range of options for graduates seeking a higher academic qualification in language studies and wishing to specialise in general linguistics (including phonetics but not applied linguistics), in historical and comparative linguistics, or in the linguistics of a specific language.

In addition to a compulsory paper in linguistic theory, you will specialise in general linguistics (B), Indo-European historical and comparative philology and linguistics (C) or in the linguistics of one or two selected languages (D).

A 25,000-word thesis is compulsory for all options.

Option B

Three exam papers are chosen from the following range of topics:

Phonetics and Phonology

Syntax

Semantics

Historical and Comparative Linguistics

Psycholinguistics and Neurolinguistics

History and Structure of a Language

Experimental Phonetics

Sociolinguistics

One option may be taken from those offered as C options for the MSt in English Language. You may also ask for one option in another subject in general linguistics; approval will be subject to the availability of proper instruction and provision for examination.

Option C

You will select two ancient Indo-European languages or language groups (eg Greek, Italic, Celtic, Anatolian, Indo-Iranian, Slavic etc). Three exam papers cover the comparative grammar, the historical grammar, and a number of set texts for linguistic commentary in the two languages or language groups.

Option D

You may select either ancient (eg Latin, Sanskrit, Akkadian) or modern languages (eg French, Italian, German, Japanese). Three exam papers cover the history and the structure of the language(s), as well as a number of set texts for linguistic commentary.

Instead of set texts for linguistic commentary, you may choose any of the modules offered under option B, except for History and Structure of a Language.
