

Course Information Sheet for entry in 2017-18

MPhil in Social Anthropology

About the course

The MPhil in Social Anthropology aims to provide a strong background in analytical and methodological issues in the subject, and practice in the critical evaluation of its sources, both in the library and in the context of fieldwork, though fieldwork is not a compulsory element of the course.

In the first year of the MPhil, you will produce coursework for some papers and prepare for at least one sat exam; there will be both core papers and options. In your second year, you will do further coursework, with the possibility of a further exam in an option course, but the bulk of that year will be spent in preparing a 30,000-word dissertation.

Teaching is by a mixture of lectures, classes (especially for the option courses) and tutorials.

Changes to courses

The University will seek to deliver each course in accordance with the descriptions set out above. However, there may be situations in which it is desirable or necessary for the University to make changes in course provision, either before or after registration. For further information, please see the University's Terms and Conditions.

Additional cost information

There are no compulsory elements of this course that entail additional costs beyond fees and living costs. However, as part of your course requirements, you may need to choose a dissertation, a project or a thesis topic. Please note that, depending on your choice of topic and the research required to complete it, you may incur additional expenses, such as travel expenses, research expenses, and field trips. You will need to meet these additional costs, although you may be able to apply for small grants from your department and/or college to help you cover some of these expenses.
