

Course Information Sheet for entry in 2016-17

MSc in Evidence-Based Health Care

About the course

The MSc in Evidence-Based Health Care is designed to help health professionals base your clinical and health management decisions on valid, reliable and relevant evidence, determined by sound scientific research and evaluation. It can be taken part-time alongside work commitments, normally over two to four years.

The MSc in Evidence-Based Health Care will position you to integrate the best available research evidence with your clinical expertise and patient values to make better informed decisions in your field of health care.

This is a joint programme between the Nuffield Department of Primary Care Health Sciences and the Department for Continuing Education's Continuing Professional Development Centre. The programme works in collaboration with the renowned Centre for Evidence-Based Medicine in Oxford.

This programme has teachers and contributors who are internationally recognised leaders in the field of evidence-based practice and teaching. The flexible structure of the course has been devised to fit with the structure of specialist training and to accommodate student choice.

The MSc in Evidence-Based Health Care is a part-time course. There are two compulsory modules, four option modules and a dissertation. Further details about the course modules can be found on the Department for Continuing Education website.

Assessment for each module will be based on a written assignment of not more than 4,000 words. The dissertation will be on a topic chosen in consultation with your supervisor and the course director and should not normally exceed 15,000 words.

The aims of the course are for you to:

- find and appraise quantitative and qualitative research evidence critically and efficiently and understand what the results mean in different contexts and for different healthcare decisions
- integrate and synthesise different sorts of information, from diverse sources, when making both individual patient and health policy decisions in a wide range of situations
- be familiar with key issues for evidence-based practice in your own professional area or specialty
- work comfortably in situations of uncertainty and make sound judgements in the absence of definitive evidence
- work comfortably in unpredictable situations and deal with complex issues systematically and creatively

- have an understanding of ethical frameworks in health care and be able to apply ethical principles to practical issues
- understand health care organisations, management process and the changing context in which organisations operate
- be pro-active in recognising the need for change and have the ability to manage change;
- understand how to work with colleagues to make informed decisions based on evidence and operate effectively in a variety of team roles
- provide leadership for evidence-based practice and research
- manage projects, time, people, and change effectively and efficiently
- present and communicate information about research evidence and evidence-based practice clearly in written, electronic and oral forms to a range of audiences
- be able to produce a robust research protocol, for a variety of different types of research question, in a format that can be submitted as an application for research funding
- be able to play a lead role in the conduct and presentation of research
- have an understanding of the ethical issues in health research and research governance
- routinely use the principles of reflective practice.
