

Course Information Sheet for entry in 2016-17

MSt in Greek and or Latin Languages and Literature

About the course

The nine-month MSt is the usual course for master's students, and the one which the faculty recommends, unless there are particular reasons for preferring the MPhil.

The MSt is designed to allow you a period of study of Greek and/or Latin Classical Literature which is both more advanced and more independent than you will be used to from your undergraduate courses, and at the same time more tightly structured and supervised than work for a doctorate.

Most, but not all, students take the course as preparation for a research degree, and for such students it might offer, for instance, linguistic training; the opportunity to become acquainted with an ancillary discipline such as papyrology or palaeography; engagement with a particular author's texts at a deeper level; and a first introduction, via the dissertation, to extended research and the extended presentation of a scholarly argument.

You will undertake three modular options. One is normally a 10,000-word dissertation. A second develops a particular skill, such as papyrology, palaeography, metre or textual criticism, or (for those who need to work on a second classical language) Elementary or Intermediate Greek or Latin; the Reception or Theoretical Approaches to Classical Literature modules may also be taken under this heading. A third is usually a text-based subject such as Greek tragedy, historiography, Cicero and Ovid. or a topic proposed by you (subject to approval by the Graduate Studies Committee). The scheduling of the options depends on the choices you make, but typically you will work on your dissertation throughout the year and study the other two options roughly sequentially.

There is the possibility to specialise in reception across the course, by choosing the Reception module option and by working on reception topics in the text option (though you will still sit a translation exam, as detailed below).

All students attend a class on research techniques in Classical literature, extending over two terms: this includes units on various aspects of Classical scholarship as well as on research resources. In the second term considerable attention is paid to presentational skills, as the students deliver papers of their own to the group.

Assessment for text options is by two essays of 5,000 words (submitted either in Hilary or Trinity term, depending on your choices) and a translation exam (in Trinity). Skills-based options are assessed either by exam or by pre-submitted work, or by a combination of the two. The dissertation is submitted in Trinity term.

As an MSt student you are assigned a supervisor, who provides overall direction for your course, and with whom you have regular meetings. Your supervisor will arrange tutors for you for each option. You will be taught both in, usually weekly or fortnightly, one-on-one supervision sessions (in particular for the dissertation and for the text options), and in (typically weekly) classes, and will yourself drive the direction of your studies. You also have the opportunity to attend a wide range of lectures, seminars and talks by visiting speakers.

In the 2014 Research Excellence Framework exercise, the faculty presented the largest number of academics in UK Classics (71). 47% of the submission was rated 4* (World-Leading) and 34% 3* (Internationally Excellent), giving the faculty by far the highest quantity of 4* or 3* research in UK Classics.

Changes to courses

The University will seek to deliver each course in accordance with the descriptions set out above. However, there may be situations in which it is desirable or necessary for the University to make changes in course provision, either before or after registration. For further information, please see the University's Terms and Conditions.

Annual fees for entry in 2016-2017

Fee Status	Tuition fee	College fee	Total annual fees
Home/EU (including islands)	£6,550	£2,933	£9,483
Overseas	£17,555	£2,933	£20,488

The fees shown above are the annual tuition and college fees for this course for entry in the 2016-17 academic year; for courses lasting longer than one year, please be aware that fees will usually increase annually. For details, please see our guidance on likely increases to fees and charges.

Tuition and college fees are payable each year for the duration of your fee liability (your fee liability is the length of time for which you are required to pay tuition and college fees).

Additional cost information

There are no compulsory elements of this course that entail additional costs beyond fees and living costs. However, as part of your course requirements, you may need to choose a dissertation, a project or a thesis topic. Please note that, depending on your choice of topic and the research required to complete it, you may incur additional expenses, such as travel expenses, research expenses, and field trips. You will need to meet these additional costs, although you may be able to apply for small grants from your department and/or college to help you cover some of these expenses.

Living costs

In addition to your fees, you will need to ensure that you have adequate funds to support your living costs for the duration of your course.

The likely living costs for 2016-17 are published below. These costs are based on a single, full-time graduate student, with no dependants, living in Oxford. We provide the cost per month so you can multiply up by the number of months you expect to live in Oxford.

	Likely living costs for 1 month		Likely living costs for 9 months		Likely living costs for 12 months
	Lower range	Upper range	Lower range	Upper range	Lower range	Upper range
Food	£265	£298	£2,384	£2,673	£3,177	£3,565
