

Course Information Sheet for entry in 2017-18

Oil and Gas (NERC Centre for Doctoral Training)

About the course

You will undertake a four year programme as part of the NERC CDT in Oil and Gas. As an Oxford student, you will join a cohort based at other core and associate partner institutions across the country, led by Heriot Watt University.

There are twenty weeks of formal training in a range of subjects, consisting of week-long modules held at a variety of field and classroom venues around the country. The training will be delivered jointly by experts from the petroleum industry and from the academic partnership. Ten weeks of this training will be in the first year, followed by five weeks in each of the second and third years. An annual conference will be held to facilitate liaison with industrial partners, and opportunities for internships with affiliated companies or institutions (eg NGOs, environmental organisations) will be developed through the partnership.

After the first year, and between years two and three, a formal report, presentation and interview are required to confirm your status as a DPhil candidate. At the end of the degree you will submit a written thesis and this is examined by viva voce by an external expert in the field and moderated by an internal member of faculty. The final award is a DPhil in Earth Sciences.

Changes to courses

The University will seek to deliver each course in accordance with the descriptions set out above. However, there may be situations in which it is desirable or necessary for the University to make changes in course provision, either before or after registration. For further information, please see the University's Terms and Conditions.

The University continuation charge, per term for entry in 2017/18, is currently £455, please be aware that this will increase annually.

For part-time students, the termly charge will be half of the termly rate payable by full-time students.

Additional cost information

Many projects have associated costs such as field work, computing, consumables and laboratory costs. These are usually covered by scholarships advertised by the Department of Earth Sciences, but not always covered by scholarships the students may have been awarded from elsewhere. Students will need to establish with their supervisor whether they have funding available to cover any such costs.
